A Mission Focus

Wherever you go in life, you need a mission to guide you. In education, career, finances and other life choices, your mission helps you decide what direction to go.

Spiritual life also involves a mission. God has a unique calling for each person, and He has given you a set of gifts all your own, with a circle of influence that nobody else has. No matter what you do in work, study or social life, this calling or mission should be your highest aim.

When the church keeps its mission in mind, and is ready to reach out to others and preach the gospel, it has mission focus. Rather than being a social club, the church becomes a place to serve others as Jesus did and help them to follow Him.

What's New?

Our intensive seminar programs were started in 2008 to provide short but intensive courses of study and practice, enabling development of essential skills in a short amount of time.

Over the years, our programs have been upgraded to meet emerging needs. Today we are integrating additional hands-on skills to prepare for mission service at home and abroad. This experience will help prepare you for active service in your local church or in a missionary setting. If you are a student or plan to enter university, the research skills and mental discipline you learn in the Mission Training Program will put you ahead of your peers.

In 2027 we are offering two programs. The first is Mission Core and aligns with the two-month program which we introduced in 2026. We have designed Mission Core to align with the university break period to enable current or entering university students to complete our program without needing to defer studies.

At the conclusion of Mission Core, if you chose to stay on, you will complete Mission Extended, which will add additional components to enhance your training.
